

EES June

The final month of June still involved a lot of certification work, but more importantly, a recent project made me exercise my adaptability skills, while testing my work under pressure skills. Because it was a stressful environment, with a large pressure coming in the form of people requiring their internet connections. These soft skills came into play as I was still able to keep calm while adapting to the challenges by experimenting and figuring out the solution to the problems.

That final experience gave me knowledge on how to handle the pressure better as well, as it is similar to a training situation.
