EES April

        I had a difficult time with my digital & technology fluency. This is the case because up until this point, I had no real practical experience working with technology of this nature, as well as living up to the client's expectations. Additionally, collaborating and adapting to the real work environment is also a big challenge for me.

        My day-to-day activities have helped a lot in developing my soft skills in these areas, especially in the corporate world. I have gained many experiences and insights for how things operate in real life scenarios. I have learnt that the soft skills I develop over time is important for the fluid nature of the work life.
